Item 5. Other Events.

On November 7, 1994, the National Transportation Safety Board (the "NTSB") recommended to the Federal Aviation Administration (the "FAA") that, among other things, the FAA restrict the operation of ATR-42 and ATR-72 turbo-propeller aircraft in icing conditions. American Eagle carriers, which are wholly-owned by AMR Eagle, a subsidiary of AMR Corporation, operate 71 ATR-42 and ATR-72 aircraft. Although there is currently no indication that the FAA will adopt the NTSB's recommendation, the adoption by the FAA of the recommendation would require many of such aircraft to be rescheduled to areas where icing conditions are unlikely to arise or, perhaps, to be removed from scheduled service. Such actions could have a material adverse effect on the financial results of AMR Corporation and the Corporation.
