

Benefits of the Proposed US Airways-American Airlines Merger for Consumers and Employees

Consumer Benefits:

- 1. Customers of the new American will have access to more travel destinations and more scheduling choices, domestically and internationally, as a result of combining two highly complementary networks.
 - Customers of the new American Airlines will enjoy the same connections they've always had and will get many more through the combined airline. With more than 1,300 new routes worldwide, the combined airline will give our customers access to more destinations than ever before.
 - The new American Airlines will offer more than 6,700 daily flights to 336 destinations in 56 countries.
 - As a result of the merger, US Airways customers will have access to 130 new cities that they currently do not have access to, and American Airlines customers will have access to 62 new cities.
 - For example, today, a customer who wants to fly from Burlington, VT to Rochester, MN on US Airways cannot. After the merger, customers will be able to do just that on the new American Airlines. Other new route examples include Rochester, MN to Daytona Beach, FL and Burlington, VT to Tulsa, OK.
- 2. The new American will maintain the current hubs of both American Airlines and US Airways, preserving and expanding flight options in cities across the country.
 - For our customers who travel frequently in and out of our combined hubs, the flight options they currently enjoy will be maintained and in many cases expanded as new routes are created.
- 3. Customers of the US Airways will have access to the world's largest loyalty program, with more ways to earn miles and more flights to redeem them on.
 - All miles earned in both programs will continue to be honored by the combined company.
 - Customers of the new American Airlines will earn miles through one expanded program – rather than two separate airlines.
 - Customers will be able to redeem miles on travel to 122 new destinations and will be able to earn miles with more than 1,000 participating companies, including more than 20 airline partners.
- 4. The new airline will be part of the oneworld® Alliance, giving U.S. travelers greater access to destinations across the globe and better flying partnerships.
 - Customers will now have access to significantly more international destinations through the oneworld Alliance, which includes airlines such as British Airways, Iberia and Japan Airlines.
 - Customers of both airlines will have greater access to more international destinations in Asia, Europe, the Caribbean and South and Central America.
 - For example, today, American Airlines does not fly to Tel Aviv, and as a result of the merger, customers will be able to fly there without changing carriers. The same goes for places such as Beijing and Tokyo, which US Airways customers will now be able to travel to on the new American Airlines.

5. The merger will create a fourth larger carrier, which will be better able to compete with United/Continental, Delta/Northwest, Southwest/Air Tran as well as smaller low-cost carriers like jetBlue, Spirit, Alaska, Frontier, Allegiant, and Virgin America – leading to greater choices and better services for customers.
 - Our goal is to create a network capable of taking customers wherever they want to travel, whenever they want to go – and this is exactly what the new airline will be able to do.
6. A more attractive and diverse network will lead to investments in things that customers value – including improving the customer experience and new services.
 - Under agreements with Airbus and Boeing, the new American Airlines will have the newest airplanes which will be equipped with improvements such as additional legroom in the main cabin, enhanced entertainment systems and inflight Wi-Fi.

Employee Benefits

1. The new American Airlines will provide employees with a path to industry competitive compensation and benefits packages and create new opportunities for growth and advancement over the long term.
 - The unions representing American Airlines pilots, flight attendants and ground employees, as well as the union representing US Airways pilots, have agreed to terms for improved collective bargaining agreements effective upon the closing of the merger.
 - In addition, the union representing US Airways flight attendants has reached a tentative agreement that includes support for the merger with American.
 - The US Airways-American merger will also provide the path to improved compensation and benefits for all employees.
2. The unions representing the companies have already begun to plan for after closing, which will help ensure a smooth transition for employees.
 - Unions representing pilots and flight attendants at American Airlines and US Airways have agreements in place to begin partnering on combined contracts.
 - With a framework already in place to govern the terms of employment and integration for union employees, we anticipate a smooth transition.
 - An independent committee of American's ARP employees will work directly with a union formed committee of passenger service employees at US Airways to merge seniority lists.
3. Employees will be able to fly to more destinations using their travel benefits.
 - Just as consumers will benefit from the expanded network, so will employees.
 - All employees and retirees of American Airlines, US Airways and their wholly-owned subsidiaries have enjoyed interim reciprocal travel privileges since March 1, 2013.
 - As a result of the merger, US Airways employees will be able to use their benefits on travel to 130 cities that US Airways doesn't have access to, and American Airlines employees will have access to 62 new cities.

- Now US Airways employees will be able to go to South America and Asia on their benefits and American Airlines employees will have greater access to European destinations.
